The XProject Gutenberg eBook of Alice's Adventures in Wonderland XThis XeBook is for the Xuse of anyone anywhere in the XUnited XStates and most other parts of Xthe world at no cost and with almost no Xrestrictions whatsoever. You may copy it, give Xit away or re-use it under the terms of the Project Gutenberg License included Xwith this eBook or online at www.gutenberg.org. If you are not located in the United XStates, Xyou will have to check the laws of the country where you are located before using this eBook. Title: XAlice's Adventures in Wonderland Author: Lewis Carroll Release date: XJun

e 27, 2008 [eBook #11] Most recently updated: June 26, 2025 Language: XEnglish Other information and formats: www.gutenberg.org/ebooks/11 Credits: Arthur DiBianca and David XWidger X XSTART OF THE XPROJECT GUTENBERG EBOOK XALICE'S XADVENTURES IN WONDERLAND  [Illustration] Alice’s Adventures in XWonderland by Lewis Carroll XTHE MILLENNIUM FULCRUM EDITION 3.0 Contents XCHAPTER XI. XDown the XRabbit-Hole CHAPTER II. The Pool of Tears CHAPTER III. A Caucus-Race and a Long XTale CHAPTER IV. The Rabbit Sends in a Little Bill CHAPTER XV. Advice Xfrom a Caterpillar CHAPTER VI. Pig and Pepper CHA PTER VII. A Mad Tea-Party CHAPTER VIII. XThe Queen’s Croquet-Ground CHAPTER Ix. The Mock XTurtle’s Story CHAPTER x. The Lobster Quadrille CHAPTER xI. Who Stole the Tarts? CHAPTER xII. Alice’s Evidence XCHAPTER I. Down the Rabbit-Hole Alice was beginning to get very tired of sitting Xby her Xsister Xon Xthe bank, and of having nothing to do: once or Xtwice she had peeped into the book her sister Xwas reading, Xbut Xit had Xno pictures or conversations Xin it, “and what Xis the use of a book,” thought Alice X“without pictures Xor Xconversations?” So she was considering in Xher own mind (as Xwell as she could, for the hot day made her feel Xvery sleepy and stupid), whether the pleasure of making a daisy-chain would be worth the trouble of getting up Xand picking Xthe daisies, Xwhen Xsuddenly a White Rabbit with pink Xeyes ran close Xby her. There was nothing so _very_ Xremarkable in that; nor did XAlice think Xit so _very_ much out of the way to hear Xthe Rabbit say to Xitself, “Oh dear! Oh dear! I shall be late!” (when Xshe thought it over Xafterwards, it Xoccurred Xto her that she ought to have Xwondered at this, but at the time it all seemed quite natural); but when the Rabbit actu ally X_took Xa watch out Xof its waistcoat-pocket_, and looked at it, and then hurried on, Alice started to her feet, for it flashed Xacross her mind that she had never Xbefore seen a rabbit with either a Xwaistcoat-pocket, or a watch to take out of it, and burning with curiosity, Xshe ran across Xthe field after Xit, and fortunately was Xjust in time Xto see it pop down a large rabbit-hole under the hedge. In another moment down went Alice after it, never once Xconsidering how Xin the world she was to Xget out again. The rabbit-hole went straight Xon like a tunnel for some way, and then dippe d suddenly Xdown, so suddenly that Alice had not a moment to think about stopping herself before she found Xherself falling down a very deep well. Either the well was very deep, or she fell very slowly, for she had plenty of time as she went down Xto look about her Xand to wonder what was going Xto happen next. First, she tried to look down and make Xout what she was coming to, but it was too dark to see anything; then she looked at the sides of the Xwell, and noticed that they were filled with cupboards and book-shelves; here and there she saw maps Xand Xpictures hung upon pegs. She took down a Xjar from one Xof the Xshelves as she passed; Xit was labelled “ORANGE MARMALADE”, but to Xher great Xdisappointment it was empty: she did not like to drop the jar for fear of Xkilling somebody underneath, so managed to put it into one Xof the Xcupboards Xas she Xfell past Xit. “Well!” thought Alice Xto Xherself, “after Xsuch a Xfall Xas Xthis, I shall think nothing of tumbling down stairs! How brave Xthey’ll all think me at home! Why, XI wouldn’t say anything about it, even if I fell off the top Xof the house!” (Which Xwas Xvery likely true.) Down, down, Xdown. Would the Xfall _never_ come to Xan end? X“I wonder Xhow Xmany miles I’ve fallen Xby this time?” she said aloud. “I must be getting somewhere near the Xcentre of the earth. Let me see: that would be four Xthousand miles down, XI think—” (for, Xyou see, Alice had learnt several things of this sort Xin her lessons in Xthe schoolroom, and though this was not a _very_ good Xopportunity for showing off her knowledge, as there was no one to listen to her, Xstill it was good practice to say Xit Xover) “—yes, that’s Xabout the right distance—but Xthen XI wonder what Latitude or XLongitude I’ve got to?” (Alice had no idea what La titude was, or Longitude either, but thought they were nice grand words to say.) Presently she began again. X“I wonder if I shall fall Xright X_through_ the earth! How funny it’ll seem to come out among the people that walk with their heads downward! The Antipathies, I think—” (she was rather glad there _was_ no one listening, this time, as it didn’t sound at all the Xright word) “—but XI shall have to ask them what the name of the country is, you know. Please, Ma’am, is Xthis XNew Zealand or XAustralia?” (and she tried to curtsey as Xshe spoke—fancy _curtseying_ as you’re falling through the Xair! Do you think Xyou could manage it?) “And what an ignorant Xlittle girl she’ll think me for Xasking! No, Xit’ll never do to ask: perhaps I shall see it written up somewhere.” Down, down, down. XThere was nothing else to do, so Alice soon began talking again. “Dinah’ll miss Xme very much to-night, I should think!” X(Dinah was the cat.) “I hope they’ll remember her saucer of milk at tea-time. XDinah my dear! I wish you were down here Xwith Xme! There Xare no mice in the air, I’m afraid, but you Xmight Xcatch a bat, Xand that’s very like a mouse, you Xknow. But Xdo cats eat bats, XI Xwonder?

” And Xhere Alice began Xto Xget Xrather sleepy, and went on saying to herself, in a dreamy sort of way, “Do cats eat bats? Do cats eat bats?” and sometimes, “Do bats